counted probably for the slack attend morning, though the hot weather undoubtedly kept a good many of the curiosity seekers away.

When Chairman Lexow called the Committee to order at 10.45 A. M. there were scarcely a score of persons in the benches reserved for spectators, while the witness seats were well filled. The bers of the Committee on hand were Senators Bradley, Pound, O'Connor, Cantor and Robertson each precinct, and dated back as far as 1892. The peculiarity of these reports was that up to the time the Grand Jury. at the instance of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, made its present-ment regarding the existence of disor-derly resorts in the city, on March 31, 1892, the captains mentioned large num-bers of disorderly houses and gambling risees.

bers of disorderly houses and galaxies places.

The lists were lengthy, and it took Mr.
Moss a long time to read them.

The reports following this presentment referred to showed that all these disorderly places were closed up, and that not a single disorderly house, gambling, policy or lottery shop, or suspicious place of any kind had been in existence in either of the precincts for the past two years.

in either of the precincts for the past two years.

The reports for the Fourteenth Pre-cincts were signed by Capts. McCullagh, Doherty and Cross, and the reports for the Eleventh Precinct by Capts. Devery, McLaughlin and Cortright.

Resorts Open, but Reported Closed. Besorts Open, but Reported Closed.

Despite the fact that the captains of those precincts had invariably reported that there were no houses of ill-fame or places of illegal resort within their jurisdictions, it appeared from reports made by the Society for the Prevention of Crime during this whole period that many such places were openly running in violation of the law.

Mr. Moss read and put in evidence in addition to the reports of the police captana the several letters written by Dr. Parkhurst to Supt. Byrnes, as well as to the captains of the two precincts mentioned, naming disorderly houses to the number of more than fifty, and calling upon the police officials to suppress them.

Following this, Mr. Moss read the re-

Following this, Mr. Moss read the replies of Capt. Devery and Inspector Williams to the letter of Dr. Parkhurst, in which they denied the charges, and stated that every one of the houses mentioned had been kept under strict surveillance, and that not a single one of the places was open, and declaring that force.

In his report Capt. Devery mentioned the fact that he had specially detailed OfficerGle nnon to watch the places and that he had reported that every one of them was closed up.

"Is the Officer referred to Ward Man Glennon?" asked Senator Lexow.

"Is, the Same," replied Mr.

"Boas."

"Boas of resolutions disagreeing with the Terre Baute Convention, which favored a continuation of the strick, and favoring soing to work at the schedule agreed upon at Columbus.

"Dead in the North River.

The body of an unknown man was found at Yes, sir, the same," replied Mr. Moss.

The Chairman turned to his associates and smiles were exchanged.

These last communications, together with one from Supt. Byrnes to the Police Commissioners, were all dated in October, 1835. Mr. Moss went on to say that at frequent intervals during this period arrests of keepers of disorderly houses had been made, and that not long afterwards an attack had been made by a mob on certain Parkhurst detectives at Essex Market Police Court, which, it was claimed, was incited by the police.

Sudden Disappearance of "Joints." In conclusion, Mr. Moss said that the object of putting all those documents in evidence was to show that up to March 31, 1862, there were hundreds of houses of ill-fame on the records at colice Headquarters, but that after that late they all suddenly disappeared, and had not been in existence since.

The first witness called was Rev. Will-am Hamilton, of Brooklyn, who said a had once been for three years pastor of the Allen Memorial Church in Rivington street.

"Your church is in the Eleventh Precinct?" asked Mr. Moss.

"Yes, sir."

"While you were living there slid you ever observe anything with regard to disorderly houses?"

"Oh, yes. There were a lot of houses in Rivington just above the church, and in Eldridge and Rivington streets. The women openly solicited from the windows and steps of the houses, and in the street."

"They often spoke to me and my assistants. Their operations were conducted openly, and no attempt was made to suppress them."

"Did you ever speak to Capt. Devery about them?"

Thrice Complained to Devery.

Thrice Complained to Devery.

"Yes, I recollect going to him three times." The first time was about a year ago, when I saw him on the steps of the station-house. I complained about the houses near the church, and he told me that he could not shut up the houses because it would do no good, It would only drive the women into tenement-houses."

only drive the women into tenementhouses,"
"Did he ever do anything towards closing any of these places?"
"Not that I saw. The conditions remained about the same as long as I stayed there. I had two other conversations with Capt. Devery shortly afterward, in which I complained not only of the disorderly houses, but about the saloons in the neighborhood which were kept open on Sunday, and about several pool-rooms near the church."

Mr. Hamilton said he saw an officer going into one of the saloons one Sunday and he asked him why he did not close the place. The officer said he did not dare to do so, "Didn't Capt. Devery ever do anything for you after your complaints?" asked Mr. Moss.

with the Reading of Captains' Reports.

Got a Pool-Room Closed.

"Yes, he did close up a pool-room that was doing business right next to my church. I complained of it several times, and he finally shut the place up."
On cross-examination by ex-Judge Ransom, Mr. Hamilton said he knew that the houses near his church were disorderly from his own observation, and he had no healtation whatever in swearing that they were likely his the houses, and he had no healtation whatever in swearing that they were places of ill-repute.
He said he had testified on the trial claurch.

Negliga costumes were in order to day at the session of the Lexow Police Investigating Committee. Although the big windows were thrown wide open, the air in the court-room was hot and oppressive. About half the audience shed its coats and sat in shirt sleeves. Waistcoats were at a discount, but palm-leaf fans in lively demand.

The fact that Chief Inquisitor Goff had announced that no startling sensations were on the programme for the day accounted probably for the slack attendant of his speaking to a policeman about a saloon, he had counted eighteen open in the counter of the day accounted probably for the slack attendant of his speaking to a policeman about a saloon, he had counted eighteen open in the counter of the day accounted probably for the slack attendant of his speaking to a policeman about a saloon, he had counted eighteen open in the counter of the day accounted probably for the slack attendant at the proposed of the speaking to a policeman about a saloon, he had counted eighteen open in the counter of the day accounted probably for the slack attendant at the proposed of the extraording the saloon of his speaking to a policeman about a saloon, he had counted eighteen open in the proposed to the substance of the proposed to the substance of the proposed to the substance of the substance

Seven Cars at Newport.

After Changing at Providence, 470 Arrive Here This Morning.

Four hundred and seventy passenger on the Fall River line steamer Plymouth, which ran on the rocks off Rose Island, near Newport, last night, arrived at the Grand Central Depot at 10.45 o'clock this morning on a special train over the Shore line.

They were a weary-looking, travel stained crowd, none of them having been able to obtain any rest during the night. Several were interviewed by an "Even-ing World" reporter, and without exception they were loud in their denunciation of the treatment they received at the hands of the Fall River line officials and of the accomodations afforded by the railroad.

All the passengers were hustled into a hastily arranged special train of seven cars at Newport, and were forced to change at Providence, where they were compelled to stay for over an hour. The train, during the first part of the journey, afforded the poorest kind of accommodations. The cars were small and stuffy, the poorest that are run over the road. The passengers were crowded into every seat, and many were com pelled to find places on top of the coal Loxes and on the arms of the seats. There was no water at all on the train, which crept along at almost a snail's

The forecast for this evening for assuring. Coolness and light showers are in sight. But in the meantime the sun will be having all the fun he wants. By 10 o'clock the thermometer registered 83 degrees and an hour afterwards it rose to 85.

The coolest place in the United States of the first shared the honors for greater heat, it being 50 degrees there at the colock.

At 11.30 o'clock there was a considerable drop in the temperature. A cloud that sprang up suddenly from nobody knows where rolled itself between the sun and New York, resulting in a drop of the mercury from 86 degrees to 84.

There was a strong likelihood shortly before noon that the cloud which had laid its palm across old sol's face, would develop prematurely into the rain which had been predicted for this evening.

At all events premonitory rumblings were heard as if the sun were "having it out" with the cloud for its impertinence in blocking his designs upon humanity.
